

Guide and Map 2019

Welcome to the Thousand Islands

Among the rocky islands, windswept pines, and clear waters of Thousand Islands National Park the city seems far away, but this park on the St. Lawrence River is only a few hours from Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa. In this traditional summer home of the Haudenosaunee and the Mississauga Anishinaabe, nature and culture intermingle. Opulent Victorian summer homes stand in contrast to rugged islands of granite. This visual mix provides endless variety for the eye and a perfect setting in which paddlers, boaters and land-based visitors come to relax and unwind. At Thousand Islands National Park you can feel like you've made an island escape while knowing that you're never far from the luxuries of the mainland.

By Paddle

The choices of paddling experiences in the park are as diverse as its many islands. First-time paddlers can test the waters with the help of regional outfitters. Experienced guides take care of every detail; introductory lessons, equipped camping for overnight stays and even gourmet snacks en route. All you have to do is unwind, take in the scenery, and enjoy the fresh air, exercise and camaraderie that come with a day on the water.

Independent spirits and experienced paddlers will enjoy exploring the islands on their own from the intimate perspective only a kayak can provide. Touring the Thousand Islands you'll find something to fascinate you around every bend: sunken ships, historic castles, and a landscape steeped in First Nations history and culture. Return to your island base camp to share the day's stories with friends at one of the park campsites or in the comfort of Parks Canada oTENTik accommodation.

The impact of the 2017 high water crisis along the St. Lawrence River continues to affect Thousand Islands National Park. Dock damage was extensive and replacements are ongoing. We encourage visitors to plan their visit in advance and review updates and status of facilities at parkscanada.gc.ca/ti.

A little planning makes for smooth sailing. Any time you visit a natural environment like the park, a bit of planning is in order to make your visit safe and enjoyable. For trip planning information, please visit adventurismart.ca. Park islands are accessible by boat only. Kayak, houseboat, power boat, other rentals and water taxi services are available from local marinas and outfitters. Nautical charts and maps are recommended, and island visitors are encouraged to watch the weather and know the forecast before setting out. Boaters and paddlers alike should familiarize themselves with conditions such as currents in river channels and larger waves on open water that may be encountered on the way to park islands. In eastern Ontario by visiting health.gov.on.ca/ent/mys Lyme to protect yourself from ticks and Lyme disease.

Good Neighbours...
... chip in. When you pay your fees you support the maintenance of park facilities.
... keep an eye on pets. When you supervise and keep your pet on a leash you protect both your pet and a unique island environment.
... make things shipshape. When you store and clean up food and other wildlife attracts you avoid unwanted visits from your animal neighbours. When fed, animals become habituated to human contact and are at higher risk of becoming aggressive.
... leave it like they found it. When you leave no trace of your stay, others will have the chance to enjoy the park as you did.
... saveour the silence. When you keep noise to a minimum you're well on your way to being a good island neighbour.

Don't forget your bicycle. The Mallorytown Landing oTENTiks are just steps away from the 1000 Islands Parkway Trail, a 37-km paved bicycle trail that follows the St. Lawrence River.

Make the most of your visit

By Boat

In Thousand Islands National Park, boaters reconnect with their loved ones and recharge against a backdrop of natural beauty. Enjoy the comforts of your boat in the sheltered bays of the park's scenic and tranquil islands. Breathe in pine-scented air on an island hike, share stories around a campfire, or relax dockside among friends.

On the Trails

Get off the treadmill and onto the trails of Thousand Islands National Park. The trails at Jones Creek offer an opportunity to be active in a beautiful setting of rugged rock faces, scenic lookouts, and tall stands of pine. Trails vary in difficulty from an easy 20-minute walk to a moderate 2-hour hike or can be combined for a full day of hiking along 12 km of winding trails.

An extensive trail network is offered at Landon Bay. You can spend an hour or all day walking the trails that wind through the fields, forests, and wetlands of the property. The view from the lookout has long been recognised as the best natural view of the Thousand Islands.
