Birding Respectfully in Banff National Park

Birding is enjoyable. But it's important to remember that the status of the world's birds is at risk due to human actions. Places like Banff National Park help birds through environmental conservation and restoration projects and programs. You can help by observing birds quietly and from a distance. Remain on designated trails and do not change habitat to improve bird viewing opportunities. Never feed birds, use recorded bird sounds, or shine lights on birds at night. Avoid using laser pointers and camera flashes on birds.

Welcome

Banff National Park is Canada's first national park and part of the UNESCO Canadian Rocky Mountain Parks World Heritage site.

Banff is great for bird watching. The park is located in a region where natural factors, including terrain and climate, create appealing habitats and breeding areas for many different types of birds. To date, 315 bird species have been observed in the park.

The park began as 26-square-kilometre (10-square-mile) hot springs reserve in 1885. Banff National Park now covers 6,641 square kilometres (2,564 square miles). Bird observations recorded in this area and used to compile this checklist date as far back as 1858.

Key

C – Common

A competent observer may find 10 or more individuals (typically) in a day of searching suitable habitat within the species' range and period of occurrence. The species can occupy suitable habitat in high densities or occur in large flocks/concentrations.

U – Uncommon

A competent observer may find one to nine individuals (typically) in a day of searching suitable habitat within the species' range and period of occurrence.

R – Rare

The species may be absent some years. If present every year, it occupies suitable habitat in low densities, occupies seldom-birded areas, or is secretive/inconspicuous.

VR – Very Rare

The species has been found in, at most, a few different years during the season.

Ex – Extirpated

The species may have occurred with some degree of regularity historically but hasn't been found in recent decades.

I – Introduced (Non-native)

☉ – Breeding Confirmed

To best fit Banff National Park's bird migration and breeding periods, the seasons herein are defined as follows:

Sp – Spring (March through May approximately)

Su – Summer (June through July approximately)

Fa – Fall (August through November approximately)

Wi – Winter (December through February approximately)

This checklist follows the 2021 edition of The Clements Checklist of Birds of the World in terms of species recognized, their names, and the sequence in which they're arranged. Species are grouped by family.

Sources for the observations used to compile this checklist include museum specimens, archival materials, history books, reference books, guidebooks, published and unpublished reports, monographs, journal and magazine articles, newsletters of the Bow Valley Naturalists, travelogues, electronic mailing lists, social media, conversations, correspondence, notebooks, park visitor centre logbooks, the park wildlife observation database and audio recording collection, bird banding data, breeding bird atlas data, the Banff Community Bird Walk, the May Species Count, the Christmas Bird Count, the North American Breeding Bird Survey, eBird, iNaturalist, and other published and unpublished datasets.
